to supplement the practice and discussion of the class hour—this practice and discussion arising from consideration of the problems they meet when instructing the younger students. Each student who teaches six hours per week is given three hours' credit for the course, each one who teaches four hours is given two hours' credit, and each one who teachers two hours is given one hour's credit.

The support which the isolated teacher receives from the interest, enthusiasm, and ideas of this student-staff is exceedingly helpful.

MRS. PERLE SHALE KINGSLEY
UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

The University of Iowa and Northwestern University have entered into a dual debate league in which the teams will be composed of two men each. The teams will be made up of men who have had no experience in inter-collegiate debate, and they will be coached by no one who has ever taken part in an inter-collegiate debate, taught public speaking, or done teaching of any kind for which pay was received. Really, the purpose is to have non-coached teams.
